Work on the new Lincoln highway west of Gettysburg, from a point just east of McKnightstown to where it connects with the Caledonia-Chambersburg section completed last year, is progressing at the rate of 2,600 feet of concrete a day.

Work was resumed on the highway about three weeks ago, but due to weather and other conditions, there have been only six days thus far on which concrete has been poured. In those six days, the E. V. Williams company of Norfolk, Va., sub-contractors on the concrete work, have laid a 16-foot lane from the "Y" at the east end of the new highway to a point almost two and a half miles west.

Need 60 Pouring Days
The highway, so far as the concrete is concerned, is now completed for this distance. Two 16-foot lanes were poured last year. The Williams company is pouring the third, or south strip now, to where it will "catch up" with the lanes done last year.

Two lanes of concrete have been laid for three miles west of McKnightstown, and a single lane extends for four miles, almost to the big grade over Mt. Newman. The Williams company estimates that it will take about 60 pouring days to complete the highway, and (Please turn to Page 8)

Here And There News Collected At Random

Norman Cousins, editor of the Saturday Review of Literature, who will address the tri-faculty dinner of Gettysburg, Dickinson and Franklin and Marshall this evening in Huber hall, is the gentleman who stunned and then lambasted Communists at their recent meeting in New York.

At a dinner for some 2800 delegates to the Cultural and Scientific conference for World Peace (a cover-up for Red propaganda) held in the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, Cousins made a ringing pro-American speech. Among other things he said:

"I ask you to believe that the American people . . . are not speaking out against the idea of peace . . . they are speaking out against a small political group in this country which has failed to live up to the rules of the game in a democracy . . . tell the folks at home that Americans are anti-Communist, not anti-humanitarian, and being anti-Communist does not automatically mean they are pro-war."

Salvation Army And State Police Befriend Merchant Marine, Stricken Tuesday

The newly-formed Gettysburg service unit of the Salvation Army had its first case Tuesday afternoon. George Bentz, 24, of Tracy, Calif., a former merchant marine who was discharged recently from the Marine hospital on Staten Island, N. Y., was taken ill while hitch-hiking from Gettysburg to Harrisburg, on one leg of his long hike to California.

Bentz, who is afflicted with epilepsy, according to state police of the Gettysburg substation, suffered a seizure on the Harrisburg road near the Rock creek bridge. The substation was called, and state police brought the man to its headquarters on Carlisle street.

Had Own Medicine
Police said Bentz had medicine furnished by the Staten Island hospital. After the attack had passed off, he was able to continue his journey, police said, but was without funds.

Police said he could not be sent to the county home because he is not a resident of Adams county. The Adams County Board of Assistance was unable to help, for the same reason, according to police. The case was referred to A. L. Taxis of the Salvation Army, which furnished transportation to Pittsburgh, where Bentz was advised to contact the Salvation Army headquarters there.

Was In Jail
Bentz spent several hours in the Adams county jail earlier Tuesday. He was picked up at 1:15 a. m. Tuesday by borough police, who filed a disorderly conduct charge against him, and obtained a commitment from Justice of the Peace John H. Bashore. Brought before Bashore later in the morning, Bentz was sentenced to one day in jail in default of a $10 fine and costs. He was released from jail and was en route toward Harrisburg when stricken Tuesday afternoon.

State police said Bentz told them he had served several years in the merchant marine, signing up first in 1942 and making several ocean trips during the war. He made his last trip, from New York to Liverpool and return, about a month ago, he said.

BLIND PENSION STAYS AT $40

Harrisburg, April 27 (AP)—Pennsylvania's blind will continue to receive a pension of $40 a month from state funds.

The House welfare committee yesterday killed a bill designed to extend the commonwealth to get $4,000,000 annually in federal funds for its aid to the blind program.

The Pennsylvania Federation of the Blind opposed the bill on the ground that a blind person must be without resources to obtain $65 monthly, proposed under the measure.

Chairman John Haudenshield (R-Allegheny) said the program would have eliminated 4,000 blind persons from the state's pension rolls and would have cut the present $40 pension of thousands of others.

He said the federal program, on first glance, appeared to aid many blind people and save the money for the commonwealth. A study showed, however, he said, that few of the state's 15,000 blind persons could qualify for the $65 monthly aid.

They would have to be in absolute want to receive it, Haudenshield said.

SCHOOL BUS BILL NEAR FINAL VOTE

Harrisburg, April 27 (AP)—Legislation requiring automobile traffic to halt while school buses are loading or unloading reached its final legislative hurdle today. The measure passed by the House, a month ago came up for a final vote in the Senate.

The bill was brought in a position for final action after Sen. Rowland Mahany (R-Crawford) offered a series of revisions.

The measure requires traffic coming from both directions to come to a complete stop while a school bus is unloading or loading students. Traffic must remain halted until it receives a go-ahead by the bus driver, or the bus resumes motion. Mahany's amendment would eliminate this requirement when a bus is in a off-highway loading zone.

The measure also requires school districts transporting pupils by school bus to establish and maintain off-highway loading zones near the schools.

Another provision requires that all school buses purchased or repainted after the measure goes into effect be painted a bus chrome (a shade of orange). Every bus also must be labeled both in front and rear and be equipped with stop signals.

Bus companies, however, hauling only a few school children along with regular passengers would not be required to be painted and marked as school buses.

The bill also provides that school bus drivers must take special tests after July 1, 1950 as well as a special physical examination. Operators of school buses run by regular bus companies would be exempt from the special tests.

New Complications On Gas Tax Refund

Harrisburg, April 27 (AP)—New complications today dogged a proposal to grant farmers a $1,500,000 annual refund on the gasoline taxes they pay on fuel used in food production.

The Senate first passed and then took back a vote approving a measure to allocate rebates at the rate of 2 1/2 cents a gallon on such fuel from the state's liquid fuels tax fund. It then amended it to allow payments from the motor license fund as well but putoff a vote until today.

The change of front came after the state association of township supervisors and county commissioners protested that the refunds would come from money which is now returned to counties, principally for work on rural roads.

The amendment limited the payment of refunds to the liquid fuels tax fund had been suggested as a possible way of meeting objections that the whole rebate proposal was unconstitutional.

Rev. Mr. Scheible were elected as clerical delegates from the Adams district to the United Lutheran church conference to be held in Des Moines, Iowa, in October, 1950. Alternate delegates selected were the Rev. Dr. J. M. Myers, Gettysburg, and the Rev. Ralph Meekley, York Springs. Selected as lay delegates were Paul E. King, principal of the Littlestown school system, and Clarence Deardorff, of Flohr's church. Lay alternates are Mrs. R. S. Saby, Carlisle street, and Clayton E. Bilheimer, West Broadway.

Urges Synod Workers

Reday urged the members of the Adams district to vote for a full time director of social missions and for a full time director of Christian Education at the forthcoming synodical sessions. The cost of the full time directors would be ten cents per communicant member for each office established, it was pointed out.

The need for social missions is tremendous, Redday pointed out. There are no facilities to take care of elderly persons who may need some care; there are no facilities to care for the unwed mother; no facilities to help in child welfare, the broken home problem and the like. There are eight mental hospitals in the area, in addition to prisons, sanatoriums and the like, he pointed out, with no particular facilities for providing "the help that the church should give" for patients and inmates when they are returned to their homes.

Hear Of Lutheran World Action

He pointed out that each parish in the Central Pennsylvania synod has been asked to assume responsibility for one displaced person. "These displaced persons are not coming on charity, they are fellow Lutherans, many are highly skilled, many hold university degrees, they are people we should be proud to have in our communities and will prove valuable citizens. Yet despite their qualifications they will be victims of prejudice and ignorance, we need a director of social missions to help in the displaced persons program, as well as in all the other programs our church should provide for society."

The Rev. Mr. Sternat spoke on Lutheran World Action pointing out that the need for food for adults has now largely passed and that medicine, milk and food for children are among the things now being provided war sufferers in Europe by Lutheran World Action. Rehabilitation of religious life and youth camps are other projects of Lutheran World Action in Europe.

"Organism Or Structure"

"We sometimes become confused between spiritual organism and an ecclesiastical structure when we speak of the church," the Rev. Dr. Fisher declared, "and thus there are fears that the church may disappear."

"But the church of Christ will survive," Doctor Fisher continued, "and it will survive because it is the only institution that takes seriously, it is the only institution interested in salvaging the broken lives of men for salvation and it is the only institution with an absolute ideal—Jesus Christ."

"Never before have more men known more about material things, and never has there been so much despair, never before so many frustrated, warped, non-joyous personalities. Only the church, with its spiritual values can provide happiness, only the church has absolute values of truth, righteousness and justice; only the church is interested in man as a man; only the church accepts nothing less than perfection."

Fine Tribute Is Paid To Late Eddie Plank, Ace Southpaw Of Major Leagues Many Years Ago

"Is Plank's lefty mark too lofty for Newhouse?" is the caption of an article by C. William Duncan, former Gettysburg Times reporter and Philadelphia sports writer, in last week's issue of The Sporting News.

In his story on the "Gettysburg Phenom" who jumped from the campus of Gettysburg college to major league stardom, and won 325 games in 17 seasons, Duncan says:

Prince Hal Newhouse, brilliant and still under 30, will start the 1949 season hoping to notch another 20 victories in his quest to beat the all-time record for southpaw victories, while Eddie Plank, holder of the title, looks down from the clouds above and chuckles. "The kid's good. I wish him luck, but he'll never make it."

In nine complete big league seasons, Newhouse has won 151 games for Detroit — and will not celebrate his twenty-eighth birthday until May 20. That's an amazing record, especially under present-day pitching conditions. In 17 seasons, Plank won 325, retiring at 42.

Only fans who are looking back at their fiftieth birthday will vividly recall Plank. He was a native of Adams county, Pa., of which the famous battlefield town of Gettysburg is the county seat. I was a youthful resident of the same town and Eddie was my baseball hero. My greatest thrill in the summer was to visit friends in Philadelphia when the Athletics were home and go to Shibe park daily (no night games then) to watch Chief Bender, Plank and Jack Coombs. A battle between Plank and Walter Johnson or Bender and Ed Walsh or Coombs and Vean Gregg was a treat.

Usually a run or two would be enough to win. The big inning of eight or ten runs was unusual.

SNUBBED BY CONNIE

Philadelphia, Pa. — Perhaps the saddest moment of Eddie Plank's career was the day he walked out of Shibe park intending to join the Federal League the following spring. Eddie passed Connie Mack, who knew of his intentions, and Connie never even said, "Goodbye."

"Maybe I should have stopped him," said Mack later. "But I was too upset by what I knew was going on."

I was too young to see Eddie work from 1901 to 1908, but watched him often from 1909 until his retirement. He wasn't a crowd pleaser for rapidly, because he took his time. He'd paw the turf, touch his cap, hitch his belt, study the batter carefully, wind up and let go.

NEWHOUSE FASTER

Eddie had a good fast ball, but Newhouse is undoubtedly faster. Plank depended mostly on the un-canny control, a fine curve, a fast one mixed in and, above all, his famous crossfire.

Plank struck out Josh Devore, lefthanded hitting Giant outfielder, four times in one World's Series game. His crossfire was working to perfection.

"They shouldn't allow that Plank to pitch from first base," Devore complained. "He's tough enough when he stays on the mound."

Plank was in his middle twenties before he ever pitched a game in the American League. He was a farmer who lived a few miles north of Gettysburg and gained a reputation throughout the county as a pitcher for the Good Intent team. He was persuaded to enter Gettysburg college and his feats as varsity pitcher attracted the attention of Connie Mack, Chief Bender, who came to the majors from the Carlisle Indians; Christy Mathewson, from Bucknell, and Plank were three college pitchers from within a radius of 150 miles who, at today's prices, would bring around a million dollars.

Ed joined Connie Mack in 1901

TONY ZALE HAS QUIT THE RING

Chicago, April 27 (AP)—Tony Zale, with enough gumption to admit that he is over the hill, has retired from the ring after a long, brilliant, tough career.

In making his decision, the "man of steel" whose age has made him a bit rusty, surrendered a $60,000 guarantee for a return bout with Marcel Cerdan. The Frenchman won Zale's middleweight boxing crown on a 12th round technical knockout in Jersey City last September 21.

The two battlers had been re-matched at New York's Polo grounds June 21. Zale, who will be 36 next month, was assured of at least $60,000 as his share.

The tournament of champions promoting firm now plans to give veteran Steve Belloise or possibly battle-scarred Jake La Motta, the Bronx Bull, a chance at Cerdan in either June or September. A Sugar Ray Robinson-Kid Gavilan welterweight title bout may be on the same card.

Zale, father of two young daughters, will not hang up his gloves. He will wear them in the role of chief instructor teaching lads of Chicago's Catholic youth organization how to fight.

STOCK GAINS SHADED

New York, April 27 (AP)—An opening burst of demand for steel issues gave the stock market an upward flip today. Fast buying did not last long, but leading issues advanced fractions to around a point in early dealings. Demand later faltered and the best gains were shaded.

must be pointed out that he has tremendous obstacles to overcome. Perhaps the old-timers were harder than pitchers of today or perhaps they just became accustomed to working more frequently. In any event, pitchers of 40 years ago started and finished more games. They weren't removed as frequently for pinch-hitters. The ball was not as lively. They were allowed more liberties with the ball, although Plank was never a splitter.

With his 151 victories in nine campaigns, Newhouse must average 20 victories for the next eight seasons, which would give him 311, and then add a 15-win season, to go ahead of Eddie.

That's an assignment just about as tough as expecting a slugger to surpass Babe Ruth's home run record. One or two bad seasons would ruin Hal's chances. The odds are against him.

But if Hal reaches the goal, and if there's a Western Union office up there in the clouds, you may be sure there'll be a message like this: "You did it, kid. My congratulations. (Signed) Ed Plank."

E.B. NINE COPS 4TH STRAIGHT

The undefeated East Berlin high school baseball team copped its fourth straight victory Tuesday afternoon by defeating Boiling Springs 4-2 at East Berlin in a playoff of an Adams county league opening day tilt.

Bill Moul's streak of 22 scoreless innings this year was shattered in the seventh inning when an East Berlin outfield miscue on Melling-er's single permitted the batsmen to circle the bases behind Drungold who had walked.

Hoopes, East Berlin receiver, collected two of the winner's four safeties, a single and double. Moul yielded but two blows to the Bubb-liers.

East Berlin will be host to Littlestown Friday while Biglerville plays at Boiling Springs.

The 39-year-old Gulian, one time all-around athlete at Gettysburg and backfield coach at Lafayette the last two years, was named yesterday to succeed Levan Smith. Smith remains at Albright as dean of men.

In addition to Lafayette, Gulian's coaching experience includes eight years at Shippensburg (Pa.) Teachers and a short shift as civilian instructor for the army air corps at Kutztown (Pa.) Teachers during the war.

Gulian also had a fling at professional baseball at Harrisburg in the Interstate league where a broken leg ended his diamond career.

ORTTANNA NIPS BENDERSVILLE 9

Orttanna pushed over a pair of runs in the last of the seventh inning to nose out Bendersville 4-3 in an Adams County league game played Tuesday evening at Orttanna as a playoff of a postponed game from Saturday.

Bendersville tabbed two runs in the opening inning on a walk to Black, single by F. Kuntz, a hit batsman and single by D. Rice. F. Kuntz's single, a wild pitch and double by Fidler produced another Bendersville run in the third.

A single by L. Wetzel, an error and single by Singley gave Orttanna a run in the third. Another run in the sixth resulted on L. Wetzel's third straight hit, an error and single by K. Deardorff. The winning runs resulted on I. Herring's pinch single, a sacrifice, a base on balls to L. Wetzel, single by B. Cease, walk to K. Deardorff and a one-base knock by K. Singley.

Today's Talk

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS
THE CIRCUS

The opening of the circus season at Madison Square Garden in New York City is an event of no mean importance. It's historic for many a child. For here is to be seen entertainment such as nothing else in all the world. Truthfully can the Ringling Brothers call their show the "Greatest Show on Earth."

When I was a boy I was not allowed to see a circus in its Big Top. I could only stand and watch the parade go by, leaving my dreams for a later time. But when that later time came something very wonderful had been lost forever, for who can preserve the first thrills and excitement of the child's first visit to the circus, except that child?

It was long after maturity when I first saw the circus in all its glory in Chicago. Each year, however, the circus has grown. There have been many famous ones, but the best of them all seems to have finally melted into the one now known as Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey, and to that show on its opening in New York a friend and myself took our way.

This entire show is a pageant of beauty, skill and innovations from start to finish. There were many of the old favorites, including that sad-faced Emmett Kelly clown, and dozens of others who were not sad, but all jollity. Great parades, realistically picturing the literature of childhood, twenty elephants under one roof, trained animals, and performers that fascinated and filled one with wonder at their exploits. And such clean entertainment. No one can leave this stupendous show and not feel glad that he went—but especially is this the child's show. His or her great event.

Never have I seen such beauty as shown by some of the pageants in this latest show. But the entire show is worth traveling miles to see. Here you will see the wildest animals brought under control by kindly treatment, and unbelievable tricks performed by them. Beautiful girls in their colorful dresses—many whose names are household ones with confirmed circus fans. And all clean living, healthy and inspiring, for they have to be this way to do the remarkable stunts that they exhibit.

James Waldo Fawcett, of the Washington Star, has a daughter who is a confirmed Circus fan. She has followed the Circus all over the country and has recently written a most interesting book called "We Fell in Love with the Circus." It is filled with her own pen drawings, and her brother and father have added their bit with fine photographs.

The American circus is as confirmed an institution as the Capitol at Washington or baseball.

Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "Earth, Wind and Sun."

FOR A FEW SECONDS
A minute late or sooner! and what difference does it make?
Well, to be that minute sooner desperate chances some will take.
They weave into the traffic in a reckless way and wild;
At high speed they turn the corners, and sometimes they kill a child.

To be that minute sooner at the place they wish to reach,
Some drive the streets so madly that the car brakes fairly screech.
They break every rule of safety and I say it to their shame:
They forget the old and crippled, and the blind they're apt to maim.

A minute late or sooner. Would it seem too long to wait?
Would it spoil the evening supper just to be a minute late?
Would the difference really matter if with care you chose to drive
And you hadn't hurt another, and had reached your home alive?

CIVIL RIGHTS TO BE ISSUE AGAIN IN LABOR DEBATE

By MAX HALL

Washington, April 27 (AP)—A Northern Democrat said today he will try to tie a civil rights amendment to the Wood labor bill, which was introduced in the House with the support of Southerners and Republicans.

The measure was offered by Rep. Wood (D-Ga.) as a substitute for the administration's Taft-Hartley repeal bill. The Wood bill would repeal the Taft-Hartley act too, but it would then write back into law many of the Taft-Hartley features.

As the House went into its second day of debate on a new labor law, Rep. Cavalcante (D-Pa.), a freshmen lawmaker, said he will propose amending the Wood bill to make it an "unfair labor practice" for either an employer or union to discriminate against a worker because of race, creed or color.

Supported By Truman
Any bill with that amendment in it would have a difficult time getting Southern support. But the amendment itself would have the same trouble.

Technically, the measure now under debate is the bill introduced by Rep. Lesinski (D-Mich.) and supported by President Truman and labor unions. It would wipe out Taft-Hartley and replace it with an enlarged version of the 1935 Wagner act.

But the Wood bill is scheduled to be acted on first, because a substitute bill must be disposed of one way or the other before the original legislation.

See Close Vote

The vote on the Wood bill—due tomorrow—is expected to be close. Speaker Rayburn (D-Tex.) and Rep. Priest (D-Tenn.), assistant Democratic House leader, both told reporters it won't pass. Rep. Halleck (R-Ind.) said it will pass.

If it fails, the House will plunge into consideration of amendments to the Lesinski bill—which is identical with a measure approved by the Senate Labor committee. Senate debate is still some weeks off.

Chances are neither the Wood nor Lesinski bill will pass the House without being amended in some respects. There were even rumors that neither bill will be passed at all.

Some supporters of the Lesinski bill are saying that Republicans and Southern Democrats really intend to kill both measures, leaving the Taft-Hartley act on the books as is.

PREDICT DROP IN STEEL PRICES

Pittsburgh, April 27 (AP)—Two steel company executives predicted today the demand for steel soon will slacken and that prices will drop.

President Ernest T. Weir told stockholders of National Steel Corporation he would not be surprised if the ingot rate of the country fell to as much as 75 per cent of capacity before the end of 1949. Basic steel prices would go lower "eventually," he added.

Weir declared "there is no thinking in terms of a wage increase inasmuch as we are in a period when we cannot afford to increase costs." He said, however, there is "no likelihood of a wage decrease."

Employees of the Weirton Steel Corporation, National Steel's largest subsidiary, are represented by an independent union.

President Ben Moreell of Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation told stockholders "The sellers' market is at an end." He said, however, that J & L has operated at more than 100 per cent of theoretical capacity so far this month. Prospects favor "good operations for the bulk of the company's products for some months," he added.

Philadelphia, April 27 (AP)—Robert V. White, president of Lehigh Coal and Navigation company, said Tuesday that because it was so warm last winter there's a strong likelihood there will be a coal shortage next winter. White made the statement at the annual meeting of the company, one of the largest anthracite producers in the world.

Gettysburg talent in the cast are Miss Madlyn Roth, Miss Catherine Reaser, Horace Armor, Ross Sheely and Henry Bream, the latter having the leading male part.

Miss Louise Dougherty will have the leading feminine role. Dr. Richard Arms is directing the play.

Personal Mention: The pupils of the second grade of the Meade school building gave their teacher, Mrs. Charles Ogden, a flower shower Monday morning at the school building in honor of her marriage which took place on Thursday night.

Red Cross Knights of General Meade Commandery No. 602, Ancient and Illustrious Knights of Malta, who motored to York to witness the conferring of the Red Cross degree at the Malta Temple Tuesday night were: Ralph Becker, Arlie Sowers, John Dotterer, Glenn Tip-ton, Leslie Kennell, Walter Kennell, Maurice Wherley and Calvin D. Stalsmith. A degree was conferred upon Robert Kennell, Arthur Warman, Chester Moose and Victor Duttera.

WEST ALLIES CAUTIOUS OVER SOVIET OFFER

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

The Western allies are moving cautiously (though hopefully) to make sure they are seeing a real oasis and not a mirage in the startling Soviet offer to lift the German blockade.

The Russians have stated their willingness to abandon the blockade if the democracies in turn will end their counter-blockade and agree to a meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers to consider the whole German question. It was the Muscovites who ended the Foreign Ministers Council some sixteen months ago by walking out on it.

The Western powers—America, Britain and France—are prepared to agree provided the Russians have no further conditions up their sleeve. This caution is inspired by the fact that, by striking coincidence, the Soviet offer comes as the other three allies conclude the agreement for the establishment of a new German republic out of the three Western zones, with Russia holding out its Eastern zone.

The Western allies are asking themselves: "Can Moscow's offer be a trick to disrupt the formation of the German government so that Russia can get complete control of a unified German regime which would include the Soviet zone?" Both General Lucius D. Clay, U. S. military governor in Germany, and U. S. Ambassador Robert D. Murphy, yesterday expressed wariness over the Soviet offer.

Lest there be any doubt regarding the attitude of the Western allies, they have made it crystal clear that they are going ahead with the creation of the new anti-Communist German republic.

Timely And Modern Suggestions Presented By Builders And Contractors

Georgian Design Always In Good Taste

Since Georgian architecture has flourished in New England for more than 100 years, it probably will remain popular for many generations to come, and the builder who chooses this style for his future home can't go far wrong.

In fact, hundreds of modern homebuilders have acknowledged the immediate appeal and the permanence of the Georgian style. There are more Georgian houses in New England than any other type with the possible exception of the Cape Cod cottage.

Home Of The Week

One advantage of the Georgian pattern is that it is suitable for any neighborhood. This is particularly true of the design presented today by the Plan Service.

Like all other houses that run true to the style, this six-room residence—it's called "The Bridgeport"—combines classic beauty, dignity and reserve. A full two stories in height, it has a hip roof which provides plenty of headroom on the second floor. At one side is an open porch which may be glazed in for winter use. Window openings are perfectly balanced and the front entrance, with its paneled door, pilasters and broken pediment, adds distinction to the front.

The elevation of the house has been kept low, in line with the modern demand for houses that look snug and close to the ground. This is accomplished by keeping the first floor close to grade and using low studded ceilings.

Practical In Size

In ground dimensions, "The Bridgeport" measures 24x30 feet, which is always a good practical size. The porch is 10 feet wide and, if it is built as shown in the accompanying sketch, the house will require a lot with at least 60-foot frontage to show it off to advantage. The present trend is to the use of wider lots and, in any event, it is a mistake to cram a house.

With a house of this type, elaborate landscaping is unnecessary, but a good, natural setting of trees is of personal preference. All-white walls with black roof, black trim and black shutters is a popular combination. A green roof with white walls and green trim is in equally good taste.

For the outside finish, the builder has a choice of shingles or clapboards. If clapboards are used, a three-inch weather exposure will give the best effect.

Wider Windows Provided

The window treatment is modern and yet manages to retain the Colonial spirit. The current demand is for wider windows, and these have been provided. Bullseye glass is recommended to give an authentic touch to the toplights in the front door.

To serve as a buffer between the inside of the house and the great outdoors, a vestibule has been provided. This opens into an entrance hall. Space has been economized by keeping the dimensions of the hall down to a minimum. The stairway is enclosed and adjoining it is a good-sized coat closet. The plans call for a full-length mirror on the closet door.

At the left of the hall, a wide arched opening gives access to the living room, which extends from the front to the back of the house. This room, 11x21.6 feet in floor dimensions, receives light and air from three sides. A Colonial fireplace is centered in the long outside wall. French doors or Dutch doors at either side of the fireplace give direct access from living room to porch.

If the builder desires, low bookshelves may be installed at each end of the room.

Suggested Color Scheme

The dining room, opening at the right of the entrance hall is 11x11 feet in dimensions and has windows at front and side. In the corners adjoining the front window are built-in china cabinets. Mahogany and blue are suggested for the color always desirable. Shrubs planted close to the house should be low, to carry out the streamline effect.

Exterior roof and wall treatment should be simple. The question of an outside color scheme is a matter

Breakfast Nook Is Aid To Housewife

In houses that have full-sized dining rooms it is frequently desirable to dedicate a corner for a breakfast nook, especially when scheme. Between dining room and the kitchen which is at the back of the house is a swinging door. The kitchen is 11x11.6 in floor measurements and receives light and air from two sides. Sink, working counters, cabinets and refrigerator are lined up along the rear wall. Ample space is provided for the range and the plans include a built-in ironing board.

Adjoining the kitchen is a back hall. Opening off the hall are a lavatory, a large storage closet, the basement stairs and a grade entrance from the yard.

Ample Closet Space

On the second floor is a well-lighted hall with two corner closets for linen. The master bedroom is 11x17 feet in dimensions; the second bedroom is 11x11 and the smallest one is 11x9. Each of the bedrooms has cross ventilation and an abundance of closet space. There are two large closets in the master bedroom.

This house should face from northwest to southeast.

The plan provides for a full basement with ample space for a recreation room if the owner decides to add this popular modern feature.

Complete plans for "The Bridgeport" may be obtained at moderate cost by writing to the Home Building Editor, The Gettysburg Times and enclosing a self-addressed envelope bearing a three-cent stamp. At least one week should be allowed for a reply.

there are junior members in the family.

The nook should have a built-in cabinet for the breakfast dishes and the children's silverware and dishes. Here also can be kept the electric cooking equipment such as grill, percolator, and waffle iron.

A folding table hinged to the wall may be built in. By having a breakfast nook, housework can be lessened and wear and tear on the dining-room furniture lessened.

Peddler of Dreams

By Peggy Dern

Chapter 1

The trailer was long, old-fashioned and shabby. The car hitched to it was a couple of a sturdy, inexpensive like and a model several years old. Underneath a towering oak tree whose leaves were beginning to feel a touch of Autumn, the trailer looked cheery and hospitable.

Felicity lifted the slices of ham on the frying pan to a platter and over her shoulder to a fifteen-year-old boy who sat hunched over book at the end of the trailer.

"Round up the gang, Jay dear. Dinner's ready," she said cheerfully.

"Oke," said Jason, and swung him if down the trailer steps.

Felicity poured up the red-gravy a bowl, added half a cup of hot ffee to the frying pan to "raise" e gravy, and poured it into the w. She scooped great spoonfuls of miny-grits into another bowl, ough a pan of hot biscuits from e stove and filled five mugs of lkan the table. She heard the ad and excited voices and the alder door opened to admit Jason, arding before him four children; e eldest, Cornelia, aged 13; the angest, Ellen, aged seven, with e clamorous ten-year-old twins eeten between them. There was some ort of argument going on, and Felicity rned to arbitrate it, as usual.

"I betcha he's got a million books, liss," reported Ellen, wide-eyed and reathless. "And more magazines—osh, how I'd like to cut paper-dolls ut of 'em. He's good-looking, too."

"He is nice, Fliss," reported the rious, round-faced Cornelia, with n eagerness entirely alien to her ave thirteen-year-old self.

Felicity ushered them all to the ble, before she said lightly:

"It would help if I had some idea rho—and what—you're all talking bout?"

"I found 'em in a trailer down the ne," Jason reported. "Some guy hat's got a bright new trailer and i swell car—and he's got enough ooks to start a second-hand store, and magazines, too. His name's Garret Forbes."

Felicity stared at the children severely.

"Haven't I warned you folks that you mustn't go around poking your noses into other people's trailers?" e demanded.

"He said he was lonesome," Cor- ella reported gravely. "And he's nice, Fliss — honestly. He's — he's swell!"

"Now, listen to me, you people!" Felicity said sternly. "If we stopped for the night in some town and stayed at a hotel, you wouldn't run down the street and dash in at peo- ple's houses, would you?"

"Tippy would," said Denny firmly.

Felicity's brown eyes danced a lit- tle. But she kept her expression stern. "Tippy would be a bad little girl if she did," she said. "Hard as it may be for you to believe, there are people in this world who don't like children—and some of them travel in trailers."

"Like Mrs. Hudgins?" asked Ellen, wide-eyed.

"Like Mrs. Hudgins," said Felicity. And then, seeing the ghost of terror in Ellen's eyes, she added smooth- ingly, "But, of course, darling, Mrs. Hudgins wouldn't really have hung polling water on the children who were skating in front of her house—the just said that to frighten them away."

"I betcha she would, too—I betcha Mrs. Hudgins is a witch that burns people," Tippy was saying cheerfully when Felicity turned on her.

"Tippy!" There was a note in Felicity's voice that the children heard but seldom, and always knew that it must be obeyed.

Tippy started, and she stammered, "Sure—I'm sorry, Fliss. I—I didn't mean anything."

"Eat your supper, darling," said Felicity to Ellen. "And nobody's go- ing to bother you ever. Only—just stay close to Fliss until we get down to Florida, where you can go swim- ming and get all nice and brown and fat! Won't that be fun?"

"Fishing, too?" asked Ellen and now the fear had gone from her eyes.

"Oh, fishing, by all means. Jay will see to that," Felicity promised.

Later when the others were in bed, Jason and Felicity sat on the steps, shivering a little in the tangy autumn air. Suddenly Felicity said:

"Ellen's better, isn't she, Jay?"

"Sure!" said Jason swiftly—too swiftly.

"Does she seem—to you—as nerv- ous as she was when we started?" asked Felicity, and held her breath for the answer.

"I don't think so," answered Jason, wanting to reassure her. "Gosh, I'd like to take a buggy whip to that Hudgins dame. What an old witch she must have been!"

A voice out of the darkness said pleasantly:

"Good evening. I brought the little girl some magazines."

In the faint yellow light that fell through the trailer's open door, Felicity saw him—a tall blond young man, perhaps twenty-five or six; dressed in gray slacks, a blue pul- over sweater, hatless, the light ashine on hair the color of ripe wheat.

Chapter 2

"Hello," said the young man, and gravely shook hands with Jason. "I'm Garrett Forbes. How do you do, Miss Horne?"

"I found the kids in Mr. Forbes' trailer," Jason explained.

"I thought they were swell," said Garrett. He held out a batch of magazines and said, "The one that looks like a talking French doll—lord, but she's a little beauty!— seemed to yearn to cut paper-dolls. And I don't imagine my customers — if any — will miss a few fashion magazines of two years ago, so I brought these along."

"It's very kind of you, Tippy will be enchanted," said Felicity, and took the magazines. "They came home raving about a man who had a million books and magazines in his trailer."

"And of course you wondered what was the big idea," said Garrett a trifle dryly.

Jason made room for him on the steps and their interest was so genuine that Garrett grinned and said lightly:

"Well, the idea was to trade the books and magazines to farmer-folk for whatever they had they didn't need — farm products and the like; and then, at the next town, sell the produce for whatever it would bring."

"Why — what a perfectly swell idea!" Felicity exclaimed.

Garrett chuckled. "So I thought when I left New York — but you'd be amazed how uninterested the farmer-folk are. It seems most of 'em have a book."

Felicity nodded. "Have you fol- lowed the main highway down from New York?" she asked politely.

"Of course. Why?"

"Living along the main highway, with buses and cars going into town — with the dairymen's associations and things like that buying up their stuff, naturally they wouldn't be interested just in 'batter'."

Garrett studied her with sharpened interest.

"You mean I'll have to haunt the back roads and all that?" he asked.

"Naturally — if you expect to make anything from your idea."

He shrugged. "Well, maybe it wasn't such a hot idea, after all."

"But it was — and is!" protested Felicity. "Why — it's wonderful! You're — you're a peddler of dreams, sort of."

Garrett was studying her with more interest. "Tell you what I'll do — I'll give you half interest if you'll help me carry out the idea."

Felicity caught her breath. "But that hardly sounds fair," she pro- tested. "Frankly, we have just money enough to get us to Florida and run us for about a month — so we couldn't put a penny into buy- ing an interest—"

"I've just told you I don't want any money from you," Garrett cut in eagerly. "Look, I may as well break down and confess that the whole plan is pretty much a wash- out. I'm not used to the country; I'm not used to being alone; I get as lonely as the devil — I almost wept on the kids' shoulders when they blew in tonight."

Felicity looked at Jason, hesitant. And before she could answer, Gar- rett added, "Of course, you'd have to get your dad and mother to agree to shift your route. Maybe they wouldn't like it—"

"Our mother is dead," Felicity said quietly. "And dad is in New York — er — resting. Waiting for just the right part to make a come- back. He's an actor."

"And you children are traveling alone?"

Felicity's head went up and her brown eyes chilled just a little. "I'm scarcely a child, Mr. Forbes," she told him curiously. "I'll be twenty-three on Christmas eve. Jay's almost sixteen. Even Ellen, the baby, is seven."

"Fliss has been our family ever since I can remember," said Jay, wary of his changing voice with its disconcerting upwards swoops and its sudden descents. "I don't remem- ber our mother, and the children don't remember theirs — all except Ellen. Her mother died only a couple of years ago."

"But I thought you were all brothers and sisters," protested Gar- rett, puzzled.

Felicity smiled. "Jason and I are," she answered. "Cornelia's mother was dad's second wife; Tippy and Denny were born of my father's third marriage, and Ellen was born after dad's third wife had divorced him and married someone else. But when the mother died, she wanted dad to take Ellen — and so she's with us."

Jason was studying Garrett's face with a faintly amused, ever so slightly embarrassed look, and sud- denly he said dryly, "Don't try to sort us out in your mind, Mr. Gar- rett. Just think of us as Felicity's family and that'll be pretty close to the truth. She's brought us up and well, she's done a pretty swell job, seems to me."

"If there's any chance of your coming into a partnership with me, you have a right to know something about me. I'm Garrett Forbes, twenty-five, sound in mind and limb, but I wouldn't be so certain about the mental part of it. In the last year or so I've had grave doubts. I won a Sweepstakes prize — sev- enty-five thousand beautiful round dollars — minus, of course, taxes and the like of that. So I promptly went off the deep end and made a pretty thorough fool of myself. I woke up in the hospital with the cheering information that I'd about wrecked my nervous system and would have to take it easy for the next twelve months, if I hope to keep on living. While I was still under the sobering influence of this statement, I checked up on my financial resources and found that I had barely enough money left to get by on for a year, by exercising extreme caution. That, of course, was when the brilliant idea of work- ing my way south via the old books, magazines and product route struck me. And I hoped to gather no end of material for that same great American novel, which was gather- ing dust among my effects."

He looked up at Felicity. "Well, now that you know the truth, how about that partnership?"

"Frankly, Mr. Forbes, we'd like it a lot, only we feel we'd be sort of — well, taking advantage of you," said Felicity earnestly.

Garrett stood up and held out his hand, grinning down at her. "Then it's agreed! That's swell! This is going to be fun. We'll settle the de- tails in the morning. Good-night."

Chapter 3

Felicity had had a good many qualms about starting off for Flor- ida in a fourth-hand trailer and a fifth- or sixth-hand car. But she had been so desperate. New York in winter, huddled in a cheap East Side tenement with the children needing heavy clothes, good nour- ishing food—and then Ellen had come to them, under-nourished, frightened half out of her baby wits by the hobgoblin tales of the old woman to whom her mother had given her, while Deloris, the mother, a burlesque star, followed her ardu- ous profession.

Only the children's need could ever have persuaded Felicity take the step she took then. She had dressed in her best—which was pretty bad—and she had gone to the Broadway offices of a dean of the theater, Charles Drummond, who was nearing seventy yet still ac- tively in harness. Charles Drum- mond, who had taken a lovely girl of sixteen and moulded her into an idol of Broadway who, at twenty, had all but broken Drummond's heart by eloping with the good- looking juvenile lead in her new show. That girl had been Felicity's mother, Hope Bannister; the good- looking juvenile had been Burton Horne, who was, in Drummond's opinion, a "ham" of very poor qual- ity.

Drummond's love for Hope had been great enough to make him forgive the blow she had dealt him. For five years he helped her in her bitter fight to lift Burton to her own pinnacle of success. Burton Horne had a profile, an athletic build, a delightful manner, and a smile; but, unfortunately for the adoring Hope's dreams, he had notheg else, not even stability of character.

When Felicity was born a year afetr her marriage, Hope had asked Drummond to be the child's god- father. Drummond had done more; he had transferred a great deal of his love for Hope to her small daughter. That love had been great enough to spread four years later to Hope's son, Jason. Hope had died when Jason was born, and Drum- mond had never forgiven Burton Horne who, the night of Hope's death, had been drunk in the taw- dry apartment of a chorus girl.

Drummond's interest in the chil- dren had provided them with an education. As much as they would accept. He would have done a great deal for them, but he could not con- ceal his contempt for Burton. Once this had come out in the open, Jason and Felicity had stiffly refused to accept any more help from him.

But now—the doctor said that Ellen must not spend the winter in New York; that the other children should be out of the chill, dank tenement, away from the cold weather; that they must have good, nourishing food. And Felicity had look came in them. She put out a work-roughened hand and touched a bright cover here, and there.

Her hand lingered on a book. She drew it out, glanced at it, lost her- self in it for a moment or two. Then the bright colors of a magazine jacket caught her eye and she lin- gered over that. Suddenly she looked up at Felicity and Garrett with something very like defiance in her eyes.

"It ain't as if I didn't do all the work of canning and preservin' and picklin'," she said, as though she dared them to deny it. "And I got a right to the eggs and butter and milk, on account o' me raising the chickens and doin' all the milkin'."

In the end she went back up the path, her arms laden with books and magazines; and a little later she and Felicity came back down the path, carrying jars of canned vegetables and fruits, a basket of apples and eggs, a jar of milk and a pound of delicious-looking butter wrapped in oiled paper.

That afternoon, after being sharp- ly rebuffed at a couple of places and ordered roughly to move on, they came to another ancient farmhouse where the pretty, bright-eyed daugh- ter of the house welcomed them, and where once more they did a good stroke of business. The farmer, pleased with his pretty daughter's eagerness, readily agreed to permit argue them to camp for the night in the woods—lot a quarter of a mile from the house, and there Felicity cooked supper.

"It would be silly for you to do your own cooking, when we have plenty here for all of us," Felicity argued with Garrett.

The children adored him, and Garrett seemed to expand in their presence. After Jason and Felicity had put the others to bed, Garrett, Jason and Felicity sat on the steps in the moonlight and talked.

"See here, Felicity," Garrett said suddenly, "you folks are pretty crowded here. There are two bunks in my trailer, and obviously I can use only one. If I'm going to eat with you, why can't I share my trailer? Jay, why don't you move your traps over to my place, and we'll all be a lot more comfortable. And my car's a sedan with a lot of seat-space going to waste. Let the children ride with me in the daytime."

Felicity stared at him. "You are fond of children, aren't you?" she marveled frankly.

"Oh, I was cut out for a family man," he assured her. "Just a nat- ural born pater familias, that's me!"

Felicity watched him go a little later, helping Jason move his rather scanty belongings to the other trail- er. And she admitted that it was very nice, indeed, being partners with Garrett Forbes.

She got up finally, gave herself a little shake and went back into the trailer. She drew the curtains that shut off the sleeping space from the front of the trailer where the small dining table stood. She sat down, brought out a battered briefcase, drew out of it a great sheaf of manu- script, half a dozen neatly sharp- ened pencils and went happily to work.

This was Felicity's secret, known not even to the children. She had been at some pains to conceal it, even from Jason. Having Jason share Garrett's trailer was going to make things easier in a lot of ways. Jason would be more comfortable, the fam- ily trailer would be less crowded—and Felicity would be able to work more easily at her play. For that was Felicity's secret; she was writing a play! Writing it gave her a great deal of pleasure. Her busy days were speeded up by her thoughts about the play; weaving bright, effective bits of dialogue as she washed dishes, mended small clothes, washed and ironed; achieving certain impor- tant stage effects. Being so deeply a child of the theater, it was not at all surprising that she should find release and pleasure in writing a play!

Yearns To Return To Dark Cubbyhole After Ten Years Sealed Away From World

By JOHN H. WINANT
New York, April 27 (AP)—A shaggy-bearded man of 33, dug out after ten years of fantastic solitude in a dark cubbyhole, yearned to return to the tomb-like cubicle in which his mother sealed him when war broke out.

Shoeless, filthy, his clothes in rags, Paul Makushak, one-time college student, stood on wobbly legs and blinked into the unaccustomed glare of electric lights.

"I liked it in there," he said, "I'd like to go back. I don't care about the outside world." Police took him to a hospital.

Strange Story
The man told a strange story of voluntary exile since 1939—when his mother sealed him off from the world with a wall of wood and plaster at the outbreak of World War II.

Makushak spent the 10 years in a tiny walled-in cubicle built in the corner of a littered third floor bedroom in a brownstone house in the Greenpoint section of Brooklyn.

His father, who runs a tailor shop in the same building, said he never

man of The Firestone Tire and Rubber company, in a recent address before the Executives club of Chicago, said:

"The tremendous abundance of our natural resources, the superior intelligence and transcendent skills of our people, our democratic form of government and the absence of powerful neighbors that might threaten our security have all been important factors in making and keeping America strong. But many other countries possess these same advantages to a greater or less degree. Surely, then, the great source of America's strength lies in our economic system, which we call individual competitive free enterprise. And that is what each and every one of us must intensify our individual efforts to preserve and defend."

"To our forefathers, freedom was a heritage so precious that without it life was not worth living. So firmly did they implant this idea into the minds and hearts of their descendants that many years later, when the United States took its place among the nations of the world, safeguards for human liberties were woven into the very fabric of the law of the land. They established a republican form of government. And they laid down the rules for its operation in a living document called the Constitution. They laid the cornerstone of a new economic system, based upon individual competitive free enterprise. The rules for its operation were recorded in the first ten amendments to the Constitution which we call the Bill of Rights. In effect, they made it possible for every person to go as far as his will and his skill permit, provided that he does not deprive his fellowman of the same right."

which he was fed. The neighbor, unidentified, told police about him.

With crowbars, police bashed down the thin plaster wall that sealed Makushak off, and lifted him back into the world.

He was dressed in heavy woolen clothing. A tattered grey stocking cap was pulled down over his thick, matted black hair. Police had to hold him up when he walked.

Dressed In Rags
His beard flared out around his face in four-inch curls, and he wore glasses that were held together with wire.

Around his legs was a pair of thick stockings, pulled up over the knees. For trousers he wore a pair of long underwear that once had been white. Knotted around his loins was a ripped and tattered grey sweater.

He said he never shaved for the decade he was in the cubbyhole, but occasionally clipped his whiskers with a pair of shears he kept there. The tiny cubicle itself was littered with trash, empty cans, and rags.

Father Thought He Was Away
Several books on shorthand lay on a makeshift shelf. Makushak said he liked to practice shorthand to while away the time. A Bible lay at arm's reach. On the floor was a pair of 1939 New York state auto license plates.

An old and battered radio was on the floor with a pair of earphones beside it.

Makushak's father, Peter, 60, lives in the same building at 102 Nassau avenue. Operator of a little tailor and dry goods shop, the father said he last saw his son as a youth of 23, when Paul one day came into the tailor shop to fix a light socket.

The father said he and his wife had quarreled several times about the son. The wife, he said, told him Paul was in Canada.

Every indication points to a good travel year for Gettysburg. Tourist traffic so far this year is above the average and it is confidently expected that there will not be a cessation of visitors.

Scores of bus tours are scheduled for the summer months. High school and college students are making their annual trek and many are including Gettysburg on their itinerary.

It should be a banner year and it is not unlikely that a million people will visit this historic shrine this year.

A good, clean town and a mosquito-free community plus a lot of courtesy and service will help a lot to keep Gettysburg in the minds of those who travel.

Sunday, May 8, is Mother's Day. Don't forget.

RUSH CONCRETE

another 30 days before it will be open to traffic.

The fills and cuts were completed last year, and work is being done by C. J. Langenfelder and Son of Baltimore, the general contractor, on grading preparatory to laying the concrete over this part of the project.

The Williams company uses a dual mix concrete mixer, which turns out a cubic yard of concrete every minute and 30 seconds. It takes 24 large dump trucks, carrying stone, sand and cement from Seven Stars to the mixer, to keep the huge machine going.

The trucks load at the railroad siding at Seven Stars and make dozens of round trips daily, backing up to the big hopper of the concrete mixer, unloading their loads and returning to Seven Stars for more.

The concrete finishing machine, and other pieces of equipment, travel on rails laid on the top of steel forms for the concrete. There are construction joints every 61 1/2 feet.

Many Norfolk negroes are employed by the Williams company, and live in quonset huts, small buildings and tents west of Hilltown. Some have their families with them.

State size desired.

GOP Senators Call For Inquiry Into Reasons For Sullivan's Resignation

TYDINGS AND DEMOCRATS SAY MATTER CLOSED

By EDWIN B. HAAKINSON
Washington, April 27 (AP)—Republican Senators today called for a detailed inquiry into the reasons for Secretary of the Navy Sullivan's resignation.

Sullivan quit yesterday with a blast at Secretary of Defense Johnson for halting construction of the USS United States, which would have been the world's largest aircraft carrier.

While Chairman Tydings (D-Md) of the Senate armed services committee chafed up the matter as a "closed incident," GOP committee members said they thought the group should dig deeper into the dispute.

Releases Johnson Letter
Democrats appeared willing to follow Tydings unless Sullivan himself should ask a Congressional airing of his differences with Johnson.

But Senator Bridges (R-NH), top-ranking GOP committee member, told reporters he thought there was "an understanding" with Tydings to call up Sullivan for an explanation "in view of the conflicting statements that have been bandied about."

Shortly after his resignation was announced by the White House, Sullivan released a letter he had sent to Johnson in which he stated, in effect, that the Navy had not been given an opportunity to present its side of the carrier question.

Johnson "Regrets"
The project had been under attack by air force backers who said the huge flat-top would allow the Navy to intrude on the air arm's strategic bombing assignment.

In his letter, Sullivan expressed fear that Johnson's action might lead to additional whittling away of naval functions and added:

"However, even if greater significance is the unprecedented action on the part of the Secretary of Defense in so drastically and arbitrarily restricting the plans of an armed service without consultation with that service."

Johnson replied with this brief statement: "I regret very much that my old friend and colleague, John L. Sullivan, has joined the aircraft carrier issue on personal grounds, and I believe that he, too, will soon regret his action."

The superstition that finding a horseshoe and nailing it over the door brings good luck appears to be merely a modification of a belief in early times when horseshoes were rare and were believed to have a protective charm.

ENTER FROZEN FROG IN RACE

Angels Camp, Calif., April 27 (AP)—

Betting was running 5 to 3 today that a frozen frog named Lazarus won't go to the post in the Calaveras county jumping frog contest.

Lazarus was shipped out of a Yosemite glacier by Dr. D. L. Albasio and entered in the famed jump next month. He's still frozen stiff in a chunk of ice in Dr. Albasio's refrigerator.

Using all available data about the glacier, the doctor computed Lazarus went into a deep freeze about 1,200 years ago—give or take a few centuries.

When he entered Lazarus he announced he'd thaw the frog out and put him in training in ample time to answer the starter's gun.

But how long can a frog take that sort of thing?

People recalled stories of frogs hopping briskly about after being confined for years in stone walls or wells. Scientists, however, took a dim view. They predicted Lazarus is deadlier than a mackerel.

Undaunted, Dr. Albasio contends Lazarus is just dormant and will snap out of it itching for some leg-work.

He had no answer for this one: if Lazarus couldn't jump far enough to elude a glacier 1,200 years ago, how could he win a jumping contest against modern-day frogs?

APPOINTS BALDWIN

Hartford, Conn., April 27 (AP)—U. S. Sen. Raymond E. Baldwin

(R-Conn) was named to the State Supreme Court of Errors Tuesday by Democratic Gov. Chester Bowles. The appointment, announced by the governor at a special news conference, removed a possible gubernatorial rival for Bowles in the 1950 state elections.

TEACHER BILL ADOPTED, HEADS FOR SIGNATURE

Harrisburg, April 27 (AP)—Education legislation termed a "milestone" in Pennsylvania's school history headed for Gov. James Duff's desk today.

A bill establishing the highest mandated maximum salaries in history and $200 a year more for most of the state's 60,000 teachers needed House agreement on minor Senate changes. The bill passed the Senate unanimously.

Sen. Paul L. Wagner (R-Schuylkill) told the Senate the bill was adopted "without pressure, threats, deals or compromises."

Its quiet progress through the legislature was in sharp contrast with the heated disputes the teacher salary question has raised in former years in the closing hours of a legislative session.

The House also pushed toward a vote a Senate measure to allow school districts more funds with which to pay the immediate pay boosts. The proposal would increase the maximum subsidies which the state could give districts for public school support.

The Senate Appropriations committee did its share in filling out the education picture by approving a $15,466,000 increase in the general appropriation bill, with $13,620,000 of the boost earmarked for education.

The appropriation measure, as approved by the House, called for expenditure of $459,789,750 by the state's executive, legislative and judicial departments in the next two years. The Senate committee boosted that total to $475,255,000.

The allotment for support of public schools was increased from $195,000,000 to $203,000,000, and $8,000,000 item covering the cost of the salary increases and a proposal to guarantee school districts against any subsidy cuts when the switch from assessed to market values occurs next year.

In addition, the committee added another $5,460,000 to the state's contributions toward the public school employees retirement fund to pay the initial cost of liberalizing the State's Teacher Pension plan. Another $160,000 also was added to the $16,000,000 earmarked for school transportation.

"We will have completed a school package for 1949 that will have made Pennsylvania the number one state in America for the treatment of school teachers," Wagner said of the whole program.

Tokyo, April 27 (AP)—Anti-foreign incidents in the Communist seizure of China are causing the Japanese to wonder how the United States and Britain can "save face." The Communist shelling of British warships in the Yangtze brought the question of prestige into focus.

King And Queen Mark Anniversary

London, April 27 (AP)—King George who proposed three times to his best girl before she accepted, celebrated his 26th wedding anniversary with her Tuesday.

Their happy marriage is one of the pride-and-joys of the British people, who love lovers.

George and Queen Elizabeth had a quiet family luncheon at Buckingham palace, presumably with Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret, although the palace wouldn't say. Otherwise there were no great activities.

Harrisburg, April 26 (AP)—The question of financing Pennsylvania's $500,000,000 soldiers bonus, if the voters approve it, popped up today as an 11th-hour controversy in the General Assembly.

The debate was set off in the Senate by a proposal for a constitutional amendment to permit a graduated income tax in the Keystone State specifically earmarked for payment of the bonus.

SEEK RECRUITS FOR ARMY, AIR FORCE IN H.S.

A program to interest high school graduates in enlisting in the U.S. Army or U.S. Air Force will get under way soon. Sgt. Frank Wolf said here today.

"High school graduates," Sgt. Wolf explained, "are an excellent source of the high-type, intelligent young men and women the services are looking for."

He said that the two services can now accept only a limited number of volunteers, so standards are high.

"We literally choose only the best," he said. "A young man or woman who is accepted for the army or the air force today has every reason to be proud."

The two services operate more than 200 technical training courses, giving the best technical training in the world. Under new career guidance plans, progress is being made toward placing enlistees in jobs for which they are best suited.

Continue Education

"The United States Armed Forces Institute gives high school graduates the chance to continue their education on the college level by study during off-duty hours. Most colleges and universities grant credits for these courses," the recruiter said, adding that "it is not the policy of the army and the air force to interfere with a young man or woman's education. We encourage students to finish high school before enlisting."

FIRE MARSHAL GOES ON TRIAL

Philadelphia, April 27 (AP) — Fire Marshal George J. Gallagher, 57, was summoned to stand trial Tuesday night behind locked doors, a procedure usually reserved for murder trials, because when the panel was completed the jury deliberating the case of Gallagher's chief assistant had not yet reached its verdict.

The verdict in yesterday's trial was withheld from the Gallagher jurors. Gallagher is charged with 12 counts of extortion involving $620 which the commonwealth contends he accepted in return for his approval of permits for oil tank installations.

The charges are similar to those on which his chief assistant, John R. Hopkins, was convicted yesterday. Hopkins was the first of eight suspended members of the fire marshal's office, including Gallagher, to be brought to trial.

Hopkins was convicted on 11 of 26 counts in an indictment charging extortion of $1,370 in exchange for the issuance of oil burner installation permits. The jurors that heard the Hopkins case were chosen from the same panel that will hear testimony in the Gallagher trial.

DRUGGISTS, Chemists cannot make GEO-MINERAL. It comes from the earth—Nature's laboratory. Contains NO dope, NO alcohol, NO oil. ONLY Nature's minerals—the oldest, most reliable remedy for rheumatism, arthritis, kidney and stomach ailments.

Wonder Minerals

FOR THOUSANDS of years sufferers, on advice of doctors, go to mineral springs to get cure, or relief. The late President Roosevelt used to go to Warm Springs in Georgia. He was helped or would not have gone there regularly twice a year.

WE HAVE all heard of the miraculous springs of Lourdes, France, and famous Thronion in ancient Greece, where, according to legend Hercules, the god of eternal strength and youth, drank its waters and bathed to be forever young.

IF YOU ARE a sufferer, and can not go to the mineral springs, try GEO-MINERAL which contains a blend of the same minerals that can be found at the world's best springs. The minerals in it may work miracles.

Amazing Results

WATCH your elimination from your bowels two or three days after you start using GEO-MINERAL. The waste, black as coal, will break away and you will SEE it! Also examine your urine. You may see impurities—poisonous waste—coming out of your kidneys, and feel the relief. Be sure to watch for all this to realize the priceless value of GEO-MINERAL.

GEO-MINERAL is not a physic, and does not interfere with the foods in the intestines. It gets down to the root, cleaning and purifying, throwing away poisons — gas, toxins and bloating. Not like physics, oils and cathartics do, but in a Natural, harmless, safe way.
